Chenille Flowers Versus
Crocuses For Spring

UP TO THE MINUTE.

A DEGREE of festive spring is lent to this otherwise quite severe hat of white chip straw, with slightly rolling brim, by the chenille posies embroidered about its rather high crown. In this case they are blue cornflowers, shaded with yellow centers. Rivaling straws are the fetching models of silk or satin, sparingly trimmed with tiny straw flowers or the naivest of quaint beaded fabrics. Pineapple straw is also popular.

Bowwow Slippers For
The Smallest Member

ALTOGETHER SATISFACTORY.

TWO ounces of wool, white, a little black wool and the same thickness as the white, or darning cotton used double would do for ears, eyes and nose, and a bone crochet hook, size 8; also a pair of soles, measuring 7 inches in length. The slippers can easily be made a larger size if more rows containing ten groups of loops are worked.

Commence with 13 ch.
First Row.—Insert hook into second chain, * hold hook and work in left hand, and with the right hand wind wool over hook and first finger of left hand twice, then over hook only (three loops of wool now seen on hook), draw all through the stitch into which hook was inserted, wool over, and draw through all stitches on hook. This forms a group of two loops at back of work. All the groups are worked in this manner.

Insert hook into next stitch and repeat from * to end, thus making twelve groups of loops along the row, 1 ch., turn.

Second Row.—Slip stitch into each stitch of previous row, taking up two threads always and taking care not to draw work at all, 1 ch., turn.

Third Row.—Work a row of loops as in first row, taking up two threads of every stitch of previous row.

Repeat second and third rows.

Sixth Row.—Same as second row.

Seventh Row.—1 group of loops into each of first five stitches, miss one stitch, 1 group into every remaining stitch, 1 ch., turn.

Eighth Row.—Same as second row.

Ninth Row.—11 groups of loops.

Tenth Row.—Same as second row.

Eleventh Row.—Same as seventh row, but 10 groups of loops, 1 ch., turn.

Twelfth Row.—Same as second row.

Thirteenth Row.—10 groups of loops.

Fourteenth Row.—Same as second row.

Repeat the thirteenth and fourteenth rows twenty times.

Fifty-fifth Row.—1 group of loops into each of the first five stitches, 2 groups into next stitch, 1 group into every remaining stitch, 1 ch., turn.

Fifty-sixth Row.—Same as second row.

Repeat the last two rows.

Fifty-ninth Row.—12 groups along row.

Sixtieth Row.—Same as second row.

Repeat the last two rows and fasten off, leaving a piece of wool hanging with which to sew up the slipper.

Place the edge of the last row to the ends of the rows at commencement of strip and sew along, the point being the toe part of slipper. Take a sharp pair of scissors and cut all the loops of wool, comb all the twist out of wool to give it the appearance of fur and trim off all uneven edges.

With the black wool work in the eyes and nose, sewing over and over with stitches 1/2 inch in length and then for the ears using the black wool, work 7 ch., 1 d.c. into each of the chain, * 1 ch., turn, miss one double crochet, 1 d.c. into each stitch, taking up both threads always; repeat from * until only one stitch remains, fasten off, leaving a piece of wool hanging; fold the triangular piece together lengthways and sew from tip to base, then sew to slipper 1 inch above the eye and slightly at side of it to look as natural as possible. Sew the slipper to the sole, turning in the toe a tiny bit at point to round it slightly.
